I thought this course was excellent. The tutor was very engaging and enthusiastic, and I felt I got a very good grounding in the topic in a short space of time.

JOURNALISTS

100 years of the NUJ

STILL AVAILABLE THROUGH THE UNION AT 40% OFF

Journalists is a comprehensive 320-page history of the National Union of Journalists, by Tim Gopsill, editor of the Journalist magazine, and Greg Neale, former Father of the NUJ Chapel at the Times and the founding editor of BBC History magazine.

It tells the story of journalists over the century that saw the mass media become part of everyday life. The media themselves are the source of much comment, but the stories of those who work in them, and their union, are rarely heard.

This account of their struggles for justice in their workplaces and for the right to report freely and independently, against the backdrop of the tumultuous events of the century, makes compelling reading.

A scholarly, comprehensible, readable and very exciting book ... it deserves a very wide readership.

TONY BENN, former MP

An inspirational volume ... should be on the bookshelf of every journalist who cares about what we do.

PAUL ROUTLEDGE, political commentator, Daily Mirror

Journalists* is published by Profile Books at £17.99, but is on offer through the union at £10, plus £2 p&p.

Go to www.nuj.org.uk and follow the link on the home page.

WANT TO HELP THE UNION?

Members interested in becoming union reps can go on the NUJ's trade union training courses, to learn the tricks of the trade. To help boost recruitment and gain recognition for the NUJ in non-recognised workplaces there are two new courses: Organising for Recruitment and Organising for Recognition.

Book a place on these courses and develop the skills and strategies to help you persuade non members to join up and then to take that next step and gain recognition in your workplace. The courses are all free and reasonable expenses are paid.
